Trainings for aid workers by aid workers

“Our training courses in programme management have been designed for those who want to join the aid sector or move on to higher positions within the sector. Are you currently working in the private sector and wish to adapt your existing managerial skills to the humanitarian world? Or do you have experience in the aid sector and seek official recognition of your skills along with up-to-date technical knowledge? Bioforce has been working closely with major international NGOs for over 30 years: NGOs are involved in creating and appraising our numerous training programmes, keeping them both cutting-edge and relevant to the job market. With trainers who are all professional aid workers, bringing a wealth of experience from across the globe, we know what we are training about! Moreover, networking and working as a group are key in our training courses: the multicultural diversity of your peers will ensure a unique learning experience..”

Diane Cadiergue, Training Coordinator

Diane joined Bioforce in 2017 as Coordinator of the training courses in project management. Previously, she spent five years as senior chief editor at the World Innovation Summit for Education, working closely with education experts and innovators from around the world. Diane has been active for twenty years in the field of international development, education and human rights. Working for NGOs across Central America, South Asia and Morocco, she has overseen educational, social and relief programmes for, and with, migrants, refugees, children, and teachers. She has collaborated with grass root organisations as well as international partners. Diane is also involved in advocacy campaigns for asylum seekers and migrants at national and European level.

The skills and knowledge I gained are still relevant to my work in the sector today

If you are looking to start a career in the humanitarian sector - directly from university/college or transferring from another sector, the HPM course is a good way to accelerate your learning and provide you a practical introduction to all the concepts you need. You'll learn how to apply the skills through the direction of experienced humanitarians and learn from discussion with other students, many of whom have a lot of experience. The skills and knowledge I gained are still relevant to my work in the sector today, 5 years after I completed the course.

Lucy, HPM alumni

Each year, more than 2000 people are trained and/or awarded certification by Bioforce in humanitarian professions and skills, or given support to make their commitment to solidarity.

Our diploma courses train participants for many humanitarian professions, from 3 months for experienced professionals or experts, to 3 years for younger participants. Places are awarded by application or Accreditation of Prior Learning (APL).

These training courses equip participants with the professional and inter-personal skills required to be fully operational and effective in your commitment to serve the needs of others.

Your commitment is enhanced by the Bioforce experience: action-based teaching methods, carried out by humanitarians, and training sessions that are both revitalising and reassuring.

Managing humanitarian and development programmes

It is challenging for many humanitarian and development organisations to recruit and retain skilled programme managers. These difficulties directly impact the efficiency of their programmes. Over recent years there has been increased attention given by humanitarian and development agencies to the quality of humanitarian and development practice and raised awareness of the importance of ensuring programme quality in the sector.

Bioforce has been actively involved in these developments through extensive consultations on the challenges faced by NGOs. Developing their ability to hire, develop and retain competent managers has been recognised as a top priority.

Both humanitarian and development organisations as well as individuals expressed the need for training programmes that enable potential and current managers to develop their technical, analytical and personal skills.

The following training programme aims at training NGO's managers within the humanitarian and development sector (NGO, associations, foundations, etc.), focusing on the 3 programme manager's core competencies:

Managing programmes and projects

Managing people and organisations

Managing finance and funding

Programme Managers' Profile These field practitioners all have strong analytical skills and decision-making abilities. They are dynamic and strong team players, a true unifying force for their teams. They demonstrate analytical ability, are pragmatic, diplomatic and adaptable. They also must have excellent communication skills and be able to delegate effectively.

Jobs and career prospects Levels of responsibility vary considerably and depend on your prior experience and skills, as well as the humanitarian context and the employing organisation. Bear in mind that you usually take on more responsibilities over time.

Some examples of positions Bioforce graduates now hold in the aid sector, showing various levels of responsibility and leadership:

- First level: proposal writer/specialist, reporting officer, monitoring officer, project officer, programme officer
- Intermediate level: head of project, budget, planning and reporting manager, monitoring and evaluation manager
- High level: project coordinator, programme coordinator, field coordinator, head of office, regional coordinator, head of mission, country director, desk, technical coordinator.

with Bioforce, become a humanitarian programme manager

At our regional training center for Europe, Bioforce offers an 400-hour course to become a programme manager in the field of relief work. With this course, which you can follow continuously or at your own pace, you will discover your future professional environment and, competency-based module after competency-based module, practical exercise after practical exercise, you will master each skill of the profession.

Choose the pace that suits you best

You have minimum a 2-year higher education diploma and at least 3 years of full-time work experience in team management, project management, budget management? Or in an area where you have demonstrated skills that are transferrable to the aid sector: health, media, social or education, civil engineering, renovation, international relations and politics, cooperation and development, agriculture, logistics...? Good news, you meet the criteria to join the course!

Now you have to choose the pace that suits you best. Here are some explanations:

continuously

A 3-month training course to attend and successfully complete the modules

From late September to December (400 hrs), at the Bioforce regional training centre for Europe.

at your own pace

Several years to attend the 5 competency-based modules

Can't make it several months? Take the 5 competency-based modules in accordance with the amount of time available in your schedule, in a maximum of 3 years.

+ 6-month field assignment (practice period)

Obtain a professional certification "Coordinateur de programme humanitaire" from Bioforce, a level 7 qualification (equivalent to a five-year higher education diploma) registered by the French National Record of Professional Qualifications. In addition, you will be granted a Bioforce/Grenoble Ecole de Management "Humanitarian Programme Manager" certificate at the end of your training period.

*When reviewing your application, our teaching team will carefully study your background (level and field of training, nature, duration and level of responsibility of your professional experience, etc.), and may suggest that you reorient your application a reorientation towards another diploma course, more suited to your profile.
